

Creative and Critical Thinking Workshop

Over half term in October 2011, I attended the Creative and Critical Thinking Workshop at Northwood College. I enjoyed three exciting days with plenty of activities to challenge me.

On the first day, we were divided into political parties such as the Labour Party, Conservative Party and Liberal Democrats Party. We designed posters, solved puzzles and took part in a fashion show where our clothes were made from the junk we had been asked to bring from home. These included bin liners, egg cartons and boxes.

On the second day, we performed a one minute show based on a fairytale. I had to be Cinderella! We also made our very own museum, making old things from everyday objects. We played a game called 'Bid For It' which I really liked.

I had a great time at this workshop. The teachers were welcoming and it was an opportunity for me to meet children from other schools.
