

Matilda's Teachers

Miss Honey is a kind loving person with beautiful blonde golden hair. She has a lovely pale Madonna face with shiny blue eyes. Her body is slim and fragile. She is a mild and quiet person who never raises her voice. She has a soft charming voice. She is adored every single day. She wears nice and simple clothes and never shows off. She loves every single child that comes near her. She is a nice young person. But even though she is nice she never seems to smile that much. She is never cross (only at Miss Trunchbull of course).

On the other hand there is Miss Trunchbull a nasty mean Headmistress. She wears bottle green breeches, and a brown cotton smock with an enormous leather belt. She has a cruel mouth with small arrogant eyes. Her hair is dark brown. She has sinewy wrists and powerful legs. On her feet she wears flat heeled brown brogues. She scowls when someone disturbs her. Miss Trunchbull is not the head teacher you would expect because she is so mean that the teachers are even afraid to talk to her. She could swot you like a fly if you are not careful. If she stepped on your foot your scream would be as loud as a lion's roar.

The two teachers are very different in many ways but Miss Honey would be a better teacher of course because she is kind, a better teacher and never tells anyone off. But the qualities of the teachers are different in many ways.
